WHAT IS CHIROPRACTIC?

The chief concern of Chiropractic care is achieving and maintaining health without the use of pharmaceutical drugs or invasive surgical procedures. These physicians focus on the structure and proper function of the spine and its effects on the musculoskeletal and neurological systems. Chiropractic is a primary contact healthcare discipline that places its emphasis on the examination, diagnosis and management of problems and/or conditions that can affect the nerves, muscles or joints of the body. Chiropractic is a progressive and natural method of health care. Chiropractic Physicians view the human body as an integrated mechanism and therefore have a profound respect for the body's ability to heal itself.

Most people associate Chiropractic care with just the treatment of back pain, neck pain and headaches. Chiropractic Physicians surpass this expectation by taking into consideration your overall health status before embarking on a treatment program, in co-operation with you, the patient. Although specializing in the mechanical disorders of joints and muscles, particularly those of the spine, Chiropractors have to take into consideration, for example, the patient's home and work environments, sporting activities, hobbies and anything else that could have an effect on an individual's physical and mental health. More than 30 million people visited Doctors of Chiropractic last year for a variety of conditions, and more and more medical doctors are referring their patients to Doctors of Chiropractic.
